Translation and Documentation Scope

A client-ready contract model for language-service projects, revisions and confidentiality.

Document type	Service agreement template
Use case	Translation, localization, editing, publication support and study materials
Core value	Defines scope before files are shared or work begins
Professional limit	Template language only; not legal advice

Prepared as a polished portfolio sample. The text demonstrates scope definition, editorial judgment, terminology control and multilingual presentation. It is not a sworn translation, legal opinion, medical advice or academic guarantee.

Recommended Scope Clause

Scriptorium will provide language and documentation services according to the agreed language pair, document type, word count, file format, delivery date and revision terms. Any additional language pair, urgent delivery, formatting reconstruction or confidential handling must be confirmed before work begins.

Project Intake Checklist

Item	Client provides	Scriptorium confirms
Language pair	Source and target language	Service level and feasibility
Document type	Field, purpose and file format	Scope, limits and delivery format
Deadline	Preferred delivery date	Standard or urgent handling
Revision	Expected review needs	Included rounds and extra-scope rules
Confidentiality	Sensitivity level	Handling method before file transfer

Professional Boundaries

This agreement model clarifies that Scriptorium provides language work, documentation and educational support. It does not replace a sworn translator, lawyer, physician, clinical provider or academic committee. Sensitive files should be shared only after a written scope and confidentiality expectation are agreed.

Revision Model

One revision round can cover terminology correction, minor tone adjustment and formatting issues within the original scope. New text, new files, new target languages or substantial rewrites should be quoted separately.
