

Academic Abstract and Terminology Pack

Original academic sample with abstract adaptation, terminology control and editorial notes.

Document type	Original academic documentation sample
Use	Thesis, article abstract, literature review and research proposal support
Commercial status	Quote-only, non-certified language and editorial support
Languages	Spanish, English, German, French, Portuguese, Italian, Russian, Czech, Chinese, Japanese, Hebrew and Arabic; historical samples in Latin, Ancient Greek, Classical Arabic, Sanskrit and Old Norse.

Base abstract

This sample examines how bilingual service documentation can increase comprehension in small organizations that work with international users. The focus is not only translation accuracy, but also the organization of information: what the service does, what it does not do, what the client must send and how revisions are handled.

Spanish adaptation

Esta muestra analiza cómo la documentación bilingüe de servicios puede aumentar la comprensión en organizaciones pequeñas que trabajan con usuarios internacionales. El enfoque no se limita a la precisión de la traducción, sino también a la organización de la información: qué hace el servicio, qué no hace, qué debe enviar el cliente y cómo se gestionan las revisiones.

Terminology control

Term	Preferred rendering	Note
scope	alcance	Use for service limits and deliverables.
revision round	ronda de revisión	Avoid vague wording such as correction.
source language	idioma origen	Keep paired with target language.
target language	idioma destino	Use consistently in forms and quotes.
confidential handling	manejo confidencial	Use before receiving sensitive files.

Editorial notes

- The abstract is shortened before translation to avoid inflated academic phrasing.
- Key service terms are standardized before drafting the final version.
- The final text keeps a professional register without promising academic acceptance.
- If the client requests a journal style, that requirement is quoted separately.